Fragment of an ancient Hebrew manuscript, likely a scroll, showing several columns of text in a cursive script. The parchment is heavily damaged, with large irregular holes and missing sections, particularly in the center and right-hand side. The text is arranged in approximately five vertical columns, with some lines appearing to be part of a larger paragraph or list. The ink is dark, and the background is a light, aged parchment color.

Another fragment of an ancient Hebrew manuscript, similar to the one above. It also shows several columns of text in a cursive script, with significant damage and missing sections. The text is arranged in approximately five vertical columns. The script is consistent with the fragment above, suggesting they are from the same or related documents. The parchment is light-colored with dark ink, and the overall appearance is that of an old, well-used and then damaged scroll.

Fragmentary text from the top section of the scroll, showing several columns of Hebrew script with significant damage and missing sections.

Fragmentary text from the bottom section of the scroll, showing several columns of Hebrew script with significant damage and missing sections.
